Coshocton Offers Thanks For Peace And Good Business

Thanksgiving Day Finds Entire County With Much to be Thankful For--Beview of Year by Business Men And Farmers Shows Why Community Is Fortunate.

Thanksgiving day, 1915, brings memories fraught with blessings to Coshocton a great multitude of the last year have run practically every week day, giving employment to hundreds and in turn bringing heaves of prosperity to the city's business in general. W. J. Armstrong, one of the city's business men, when interviewed, said he believed this was one of the blessings that life-long residents of the city were apt to overlook because it seemed to be but that really it is an unusually favorable condition and one not found in many cities of this size or even larger.

"I believe," said Mr. Armstrong, "it is possible for every person in this city who wishes work to have it and this of itself is something to make everyone thankful."

Lots Of Churches.

Rev. Dr. E. O. Buxton, pastor of Green St. M. E. church and a comparatively newcomer to the city says he believes Coshocton is particularly well blessed with things for which to be thankful. Ent-

COUNTY CROPS FAIRLY HEAVY DESPITE RAIN

Farmers Have Reason To Be Thankful For Grain And Fruit Averages

ESTIMATE AVERAGE CORN CROP AT 40 BU.

Wheat Average For County Estimated At 25 Bushels —Hay 1 1-2 Tons

Coshocton county farmers today have just reason to be thankful for the fact that almost uniformly throughout the county fair crops of grain and fruit were garnered.

Although definite figures could not be ascertained for reasons at once evident, it was estimated by different farmers throughout the county that the yields of the different grains would reach the following averages per acre:

Corn ..... 40 bushels
Wheat ..... 25 bushels
Oats ..... 32 bushels
Hay ..... 1 1-2 tons.

Reports generally agree throughout the county that conditions for the planting of corn were favorable and that the crop was planted about the usual time. The long and continued drouth, however, held back the growth of the young stalks until late in the season when the rainfall became more abundant.

Lots Of Rain.

As a matter of fact it became too abundant for the farmers in the river valleys and much of the grain was destroyed or blighted by floods at the time it was ready to be laid aside. In the river bottoms along the Walhonding it was said last night that only about half the usual crop was harvested as the result of these overflows. One farmer who usually husks from 750 to 800 bushels from a corn field, this year husked but 250. The quality of the corn is also said to be inferior, the grain being chaffy and soft. Hill land averaged about the same as bottom land.

A Good Average.

Wheat was also damaged by the overflows. Thousands of bushels were destroyed by rot while standing in shock while almost as many more were carried away by the river currents which swept over the river bottoms along the Walhonding and Tuscarawas rivers and Mill Creek during the rainy part of June. In spite of this it is said that the average acreage yield throughout the county will be about 25 bushels which is considered a fair general average. A few exceptional fields averaged 30, 35 and 36 bushels per acre, but these were rare.

In general, it might be said, that reports from the eastern and western sections of the county indicate a larger yield of wheat than is usual.

This county does not raise a large crop of hay, years the crop being practically negligible. Those who planted fields in this crop last fall report that a good yield was harvested, the general average being about 1 1-2 tons per acre.

Rain Spoils Hay.

Hay in the eastern part of the county was more or less weedy, the yield being spoiled by the fact that wet weather allowed the weeds to get the start of the young hay and choke its growth. This however, did not appear to hold good in the case of northern

Turkey Dinners, Dances, Football And Theaters Are Today's Headliners

For Coshocton's "Thousands" including those who choose to eat their turkey by their own firesides, and their guests, Thanksgiving day will offer a variety for relaxation from business and an opportunity to enjoy all sorts of pastimes of a varied nature.

Coshocton's business places will close without exception be closed during most of the day. Law offices, realestate offices, banks, clothing stores, drygoods houses, barber shops, wholesale establishments, all will observe the day. Some business houses will close during the day. Business will keep their places of business open until noon in order to give you a chance to get a toast in case your turkey does not arrive. The postoffice employes will also take a holiday. One delivery will be made this morning about the city routes but rural patrons will be forced to wait until tomorrow.

All day Wednesday the ticket agents were busy selling tickets to outbound passengers for points east as far as Pittsburg, north to Mansfield, and west to Columbus and Dayton. Zanesville, Newcomerstown, Cambridge, Newark, all drew their share from Coshocton of those who chose to spend the day with relatives and friends in other cities.

Some Come In.

The late trains last night however saw the tide turning and each train that came in brought party after party of out-of-town acquaintances and friends into the city who will spend the day visiting, feasting, making-merry, and the renewing of old acquaintances. Families will be reunited and together enjoy the amusements of the day.

Following the breakfast and the chats which will follow while the dishes are being made ready for the big feast, those who appreciate football will have an opportunity to satisfy their whim at the local athletic grounds in witnessing the Coshocton-Zanesville Phi Sig fraternity teams in action. The game will be called at 10:30 sharp with Dan Meek as referee.

The Zanesville squad will arrive on the Pennsy early train in the morning and will be accompanied by a number of rooters who will deliver the goods with yells and other diversions. Once on the field, excitement enough will be provided when the two teams clash. Old style football will be the order of the day, and Coshocton will be represented by several of her old stars at the game. Zanesville also will have many of her former high school and college players in action.

Following the game will come the big event of the day, when the family will gather around the big table spread with all the luxuries of the season and graced with the huge turkey as a centerpiece, attractive if not artistic.

The Big Game.

Those who did not get their football appetite satisfied during the morning hours will have a chance to witness the Coshocton-Millersburg high school contest which will be staged at the fairground beginning at 2:30. Millersburg is an unknown quanity

Ford to Lead Peace Party Into Europe

Charters Scandinavian Liner And Will Sail December 4 -- Neutral Conference to be Held In Holland City--Under Auspices of Women --Plans Outlined.

New York, Nov. 24.—Henry Ford, the Detroit automobile manufacturer, announced today that he would take a peace expedition to Europe to attempt to end the war. He said he had chartered the Scandinavian liner Oscar II., which will sail on December 4th, with Mr. Ford and his party.

Mr. Ford will invite leading American pacifists to join the expedition and those of other neutral nations as well. He aims to have a great peace conference at one of the European capitals.

Ford Outlines Plans

Mr. Ford outlined his peace plan in the following statement: "This conference is to be a neutral conference. I shall invite all the prominent people who are opposed to war and want to put a quick end to the struggle to get together in some one of the larger cities in Holland or one of the Scandinavian countries.

"I shall charter the Oscar II. to take the delegates who shall be chosen from the United States, Central and South America to Europe. At the same time delegates will be asked to join in the conference from all the neutral countries of Europe. I have not yet issued any invitations.

Under Auspices Of Women

"But the conference will be held under the auspices of the International Committee of Women for Permanent Peace. Of course representatives of every other body existing for the same purpose will be asked as well as individuals in sympathy with the movement. The Oscar II. will sail from New York on Dec. 4.

"I have had a conference with President Wilson in Washington last Friday and outlined my plan to him. However, I am not at liberty to give the president's views.

"If I personally can do any good as a member of the conference, I shall go with the other delegates on the Oscar II. I want to put an end to this dreadful conflict and I believe that we shall get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas days. We will show to the world the horror of this war where thousands are killed daily.

Court Will Decide Gas Case First

It is probable that the court of appeals will first take up the motion argued yesterday for a temporary restraining order to prevent the Coshocton Gas Company from charging the increased gas rate. The motion was argued by Attorney Merrell and City Solicitor Ely for the city, and Attorney Pomerene who represents the gas company.

Court of appeals completed its session here yesterday and a large number of cases are to be decided. It was stated yesterday that a decision in the gas case will probably be handed down before the other cases are taken up. Decisions in other cases are not expected for several weeks.

The case of Miller vs. The Coshocton Brick Co., on error, was heard by the court before adjournment Tuesday.

Jitneys May Come To City

It was said Wednesday that Coshocton's jitney service may be re-established by Ashtabula capital, a man from that city having been in the city conferring with the mayor in regard to the project. He is said to have expressed himself favorably on the project. He at one time operated a system in Ashtabula but was forced to withdraw from the business because of the tax placed upon the lines by a city ordinance which, owing to competition from street cars, made the service impracticable.

LEAVE HOSPITAL

Mrs. Jacob Hoffman was dismissed Wednesday from the City hospital where she has been confined for the past two weeks following the birth of her son Leonard. The Hoffmans reside on Chestnut street.

Miss Helen McBane, of East Vine street, is on the sick list.

Sycamore Building Is Closed

The Sycamore school was ordered closed Wednesday by Superintendent of Schools Bryant because of the outbreak of scarlet fever. A son of Mr. and Mrs. Grier Coleman, of Locust street, was taken ill Tuesday and the case was diagnosed Wednesday as scarlet fever. He attends the Sycamore school.

The closing of the school was decided upon to prevent the possibility of the spread of the disease and the rooms ordered fumigated. Because of the order, the Thanksgiving exercises of the school were omitted. The Coleman child is suffering from a mild form of the malady.

SECOND OF COURSE.

The second number of the Plainfield Lecture course will be held in the M. P. church at Plainfield, Saturday evening, Nov. 27th.

Mrs. Anna Baker, of Plainfield, is visiting her sister, Mrs. L. E. Edwards, of North Tenth street.

Her husband, Levi Thornsley, preceded her to the grave six years ago. She is survived by the following children: Roy Thornsley, of Elyria, Joseph Thornsley and Charles Blackburn of Coshocton.

THE FROST IS ON THE PUNKIN.

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock,
And you hear the kyouck and gobble of the struttin' turkey-cock,
And the clackin' of the guineys and the cluckin' of the hens,
And the rooster's hallylooyer as he tiptoes on the fence;
O, it's then's tha time a feller is a-feelin' at his best,
With the risin' sun to greet him from a night of peaceful rest,
As he leaves the house, bareheaded and goes out to feed the stock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

They's something kindo' harty-like about the atmusfere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here—
Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossums on the trees,
And the munble of the hummin'-birds and buzzin' of the bees;
But the air's so appetizin'; and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny morning of the airly autumn days,
Is a pictur' that no painter has the colorin' to mock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.

The husky, rusty russel of the tossels of the corn,
And the rustlin' of the tangled leaves, as golden as the morn;
The stubble in the furries—kindo' lonesome-like, but still
A-preachin' sermums to us of the barns they growed to fill;
The strawstacks in the medder, and the reaper in the shed;
The hosses in their stalls below—the clover overhead!—
O, it sets my hart a-clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock!

Then your apples all is gethered, and the ones a feller keeps
Is poured around the cellar-floor in red and yellow heaps;
And your cider-makin's over, and your wimmern-folks is thru
With their mince and apple-butter, and theyr souse and sausage, too!
I don't know how to tell it—but ef sich a thing could be
As the Angels wantin' boardin', and they'd call around on me—
I'd want to 'commodate 'em—all the whole-indurin' flock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock!

—James Whitcomb Riley.

Girl And Man Taken By Officer

Harry Stewart and Alice Lint were arrested yesterday afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Earl Cullison near Bakersville and are being held at the county jail. Stewart while at work at the Eureka laundry was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Cullison on an old charge of being disorderly on a Pennsylvania passenger train.

The Lint girl is wanted for having violated her parole from the Girls' Industrial school at Delaware.

Workman Scalded

Walter Ryan, aged 27, residing on South Lawn avenue, was painfully scalded about the feet and lower limbs Wednesday when he fell into a pit of boiling water while at work at the Eureka laundry where he is employed as a fireman.

Ryan stepped from the boiler room upon the planking used to cover the cement pit used as an exhaust basin for the steam from the engines. The planking was not laid securely on its base and allowed Ryan to fall into seven inches of boiling water. He was attended by Dr. Lear and later removed to his home in an ambulance.

Karr And Lawrence Leaders

Fred C. Karr, son of John Karr, and Jay Lawrence, son of Carlos Lawrence, are the champion corn-growing lads of the county during the year 1915 according to the announcement of the State Board of Agriculture. Karr raised 94.373 bushels on an acre plot while Lawrence raised 81.692. Both of the lads raised twice as much as the general average acre yield throughout the state.

Only four boys will make the eastern trip with their expenses paid by the state. They are Dewey Hines, Darke county lad, who raised 153.75 bushels on a single acre; Ervin Neidling, of Lorain county; Russell Shrigley, of Crawford county and Dewey Goddard, of Athens county. Coshocton county ranked seventeenth in number of bushels per acre according to the full figures of the contest.

He was cranking his car when the machine started and ran over him. After he had apparently recovered from the effects of this accident and was about to leave the hospital it was discovered that cancer of the stomach had developed and he remained in the hospital, where he had been cared for until his death last night.

Mr. Wilhelm was a well known painter of the city and resided with his son, William Wilhelm, at 1114 Adams street. He was a member of the United Brethren church. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE for a better and a greater Coshocton.

A High Aim

"I cannot tell you gentlemen how much I appreciate this honor. No man can have a greater honor than to be called by his neighbors and business associates to head an organization like this. I may make errors of judgment but my heart is in the right place and I am willing to sacrifice time and every ounce of energy and give each ability and may have to make this organization the starting point of the better, cleaner, larger Coshocton of the future."

Committee reports involving a banquet early in December; the selection of suitable headquarters; plans for enlarging the membership to take in farmers and business men through the county; and speakers for the proposed banquet who are versed in the inauguration of civic bodies were made by the heads of various committees and the committees continued.

Mr. Gray and Mr. Gayle, the new president and secretary, respectively, were then installed. Further committee work and the naming of new committees was postponed until such time as will be required for the new officials to get closer in touch with what has been done and also to perfect their own plans for future activities.

That Normal School.

Mr. Gray then called for short addresses from various members. These talks took on a wide range. Members of the old Board of Trade dwelt on the accomplishments of the past. Numerous possibilities for the future were point ed out by others. The fact that the state is looking for a suitable site in this section of Ohio for a new State Normal school was pointed out and the new officers will at once get in touch with Governor Willis and the committee of five he has named to select such site. The idea of building for the future rather than the present, the necessity of having certain fixed policies to be followed year after year; the inculcation of a "get-together-spirit"; and the determination to make Coshocton not meerly a larger and more prosperous city, but a better place in which to work and own homes, were among the ideas advanced in a number of really good impromptu talks.

Meet Friday.

Among those on whom President Gray called were: T. L. Montgomery, E. O. Baxton, C. F. Gosser, E. C. Crawford, S. M. Snyder; M. A. McConnell, C. D. Brooke, William Tish, Frank Karr and E. C. Compton.

A meeting of the Board of Governors was called for next Friday evening at 7 o'clock. At this time plans for extending the membership to every part of the county will be discussed and also suggestions for future activity in the securing of new industries will be considered.

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the Germans call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

Library To Aid Parents

At the request of the National Boy Scout leaders, the Coshocton public library is making every effort possible to insure the success of the first "Safety First Juvenile Book Week" which the leaders of the movement hope to make an annual event. The library staff will be glad to confer with the parents who are interested in buying the best books for their boys; the staff is prepared to furnish lists which have been approved both by the Boy Scout leaders, and by the American Library Association. A shelf of recommended books will be reserved during the week of Nov. 28th, for the inspection of those who are interested in such books, and the librarians will be glad to advise as to the best editions of the books to buy. It is hoped that the parents and others interested in the welfare of the Coshocton boys will cooperate by making Safety First a consideration in the buying of boys' books as well as in the things which pertain to their physical safety.

The first year of his new departure saw the sale of calves valued at $5,000 and recently before coming back to Ohio he sold another lot which netted him the tidy sum of $7,000. His original investment in the cattle business was $12,000 expended for cattle at $18 per head.

Bishop Moore Dies Of Stroke

Lingering unconscious at Christ hospital, Cincinnati, Bishop David H. Moore of the Methodist church, who suffered an apoplectic attack on a train en route from Chicago to Cincinnati Monday night, died at 10.15 p. m. Tuesday. The hospital physicians advised from the first that there was no hope and relatives were sent for. His son, Jennings, from Chicago, arrived before his death, but he was not recognized by his father. A Pullman porter found him apparently asleep in his berth and being unable to awaken him, gave the alarm.

The day of his death was the fourth anniversary of that of his wife, who died of shock following the burning of the building in which they made their home at Cincinnati. He was traveling alone when stricken. His unmarried daughter, Miss Marian, who had been with him to California, had stopped off to visit in Chicago.

Tavenner Says Daniels Can Get Facts Against Armor Plate Concerns

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—That Secretary Daniels has a good chance now to obtain information concerning alleged gigantic profits of armor plate concerns furnishing faulty product to the United States government, is the statement of Congressman Clyde H. Tavenner.

The following is an extract from the congressional record concerning the matter:

"One of the strongest arguments in favor of a policy of complete government manufacture of all materials of war is that such a policy will remove all incentive on the part of the government by private manufacturers. The war trust has never hesitated to cheat the Government when it found an opportunity to do so, and it has appeared to find such opportunities. It is probable that the exact extent of the frauds that have been perpetrated upon the Government by the war trust will never be known, because it has been only by sheer accident that such frauds have become public in a few instances.

"A proposition has been made to Secretary Daniels, however, that if he will agree to reward those who furnish the evidence of extensive armor-plate swindles with a certain percentage of the sums recovered from the armor ring as a result of such information that it will be forthcoming. Those who have made this proposition to the Secretary state that the men who have such information have dealings with the armor concerns, and that others who would testify are in the employment of the armor manufacturers, and that they can not sacrifice their interests and means of livelihood without some kind of protection. Since there would be no cost to the Government, unless it was able to actually recover fines from the armor patriots, it can not be seen how the Government can well refuse this proposition. There is little doubt but that the Government has paid high prices for interior and "doctored" and defective armor plates, guns, and gun forgings in scores of instances without the same being detected.

Enter Andy.

"Any discussion as to armor frauds necessitates the mention of one of our prominent millionaires who travels about the country posing as a great patriot—Mr. Andrew Carnegie, who, despite his intimation that he has "retired," holds $300,000,000 worth of bonds in the United States Steel Corporation, which in turn owns the Carnegie and other war-trafficking subsidiaries, which never hesitate to take advantage of their strangle hold of our Army and Navy. Mr. Carnegie's protestations of patriotism notwithstanding, Mr. Carnegie's slice of pork resulting from his $300,000,000 worth of bonds amounts to $16,000,000 annually. The American taxpayers contribute the greater portion of this in the form of increased cost of living.

"On January 7, 1911, Mr. Carnegie made a speech before the Republican club in New York City, in which he told how he came to go into the armor-plate business.

"'I was coaching in Scotland,' he said, 'when I got a cablegram from Secretary Tracy.'

"This is the same Secretary of the Navy Tracy who, after leaving the Government service, became the attorney for the Carnegie Co.

"It was to the effect that President says he understands it to be your duty to enter into the manufacture of armor and save the ships from waiting on the stocks for want of it.'

Why He Started.

"Mr. Carnegie proceeded then to say:

"'That telegram settled it, for whenever the public calls on me for anything I can do, unless I fall dead, it is my glory to respond.

"'That is what I did, because the President asked me to do it, and for my country, I consider it the voice of God.'

"Mr. Carnegie went into the armor business as a result of listening to the "voice of God," but there is a sufficiently large amount of documentary evidence to indicate that once in the armor business with Uncle Sam as a customer, his hearing must have been defective."

The Battle-Cry

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Yes, dear—please," she almost whispered, and the man bowed in acquiescence.

"Good night," he said gravely, and picking up his hat, he started across the ridge.

But now there were no ghosts in his life, for all the way over that rough trail he was looking up at the stars and repeating incredulously over and over to himself: "She loves me!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

In a small room over the post office in Peril an attorney, whose professional success had always been precarious, received those few clients who came to him for consultation. The lawyer's name was Walter Hackley, but he was better known as Clayheel Hackley, because he never wore socks and his bare ankles were tanned to the hue of river-bank mud.

His features were wizened and his eyes shifty. He was a coward and an intriguer by nature and inclination. It was logical enough that when the verdict of the director's table that Bad Anse Havey was a nuisance filtered down the line the persons seeking native methods for abating the nuisance should come to Clayheel Hackley.

One day in August this attorney at law, together with Jim Fletcher and a tricky youth who enjoyed the distinction of holding office as telegraph operator at the Peril station, caucused together in Hackley's dingy room.

In the death of Bad Anse Havey this trio saw a joint advantage, since the abating of such a nuisance would not go unrewarded.

"Gentlemen," said the attorney, his wizened face working nervously, "this business has need to be expeditious. Gentlemen—it requires, in its nature, to be expeditious. A few more failures and we are done for."

"Well, tell us how ye aims ter do hit," growled the telegraph operator.

"Jim Fletcher has the idea," replied the lawyer impressively. "Quite the right idea. How many men can you trust on a job like this, Jim?"

"As many as ye needs," was the confident response. "A dozen or a score if they're wanted."

"Enough to make it sure, but not too many," urged Hackley. "We should set a day precisely as the court would set a day for—er—an execution. The force you send out should simply stay on the job until it's done. If Anse Havey can be got alone, so much the better. But above all—" The lawyer paused and spoke with his most forceful emphasis: "Don't just wound this man. See that the thing is finally and definitely settled."

"I'll be there myself," Jim Fletcher assured him. "Now when is this day goin' ter be?"

"This is Monday?" reflected the attorney. "There is no advantage in delay. It will take a day or two to get ready. Let the case be docketed, as I might say—for Thursday."

* * * * * * *

Anse Havey had gone to Lexington. Never again did he mean to hold against himself the accusation of "the unlit lamp and the ungirt loin." He knew that she loved him.

In Lexington he had bought a ring and at Peril he had got a marriage license. His campfollowing days were over. He had one youth, and he knew that if his enemies succeeded in their designs that might at any moment be snapped short with sudden death, it did not seem to him that one of its golden hours should be wasted.

As he came out of the courthouse with the invaluable piece of paper in his pocket two men, seemingly unarmed, rose from the doorway of the store across the street and drifted toward their hitched horses.

Young Milt McBriar had ridden over to Peril that day with several companions, and Anse Havey went back with them. So it happened that quite accidentally he made this journey under escort. The men who rode a little way in his rear cursed their luck—and waited. And, though they lurked in hiding all that afternoon near Anse Havey's house, they saw nothing more of their intended victim.

Anse was keenly alive to each day's impending threat, and when he recognized the face of Jim Fletcher in Peril as he came through, he had read mischief in the eyes and recognized that the menace had drawn closer.

So, when he was ready to cross the ridge to the school, he obeyed an old sense of caution and left his horse saddled at the front fence that it might seem as if he were going out—but had not yet gone.

He had sent a messenger for Good Anse Talbot, and the preacher arrived while he was at his supper.

"Brother Anse," he said, "I'm got to need ye some time betwixt now and midnight. I want ye to tarry here till I come back."

"What's the nature of business ye needs me for, Anse?" demanded the missionary. "I hadn't hardly ought ter wait. That's a child ailin' up the top fork of little fork of Turkey-Foot creek."

But Bad Anse only shook his head. "It's the best business ye ever did," he confidently assured the preacher. "But I can't tell ye yet. Is the child in any danger?"

"I reckon not; hit's jest ailin' bad—"

The brown-faced man sat dubiously shaking his head, and Anse's features suddenly set and hardened.

"I needs ye," he said. "Ain't that enough? I'm goin' to need ye bad."

"That's a right strong reason, Anse, but—"

For an instant the old dominating will which had not yet learned to brook mutiny leaped into Anse Havey's eyes. His words came in a harsher voice:

"Will you stay of your own free will because I'm goin' to need ye, Brother Anse?" he demanded. "Because, by God, ye're goin' to stay—one way or another."

"Does ye mean ye aims ter hold me hyar by force?"

"Not unless ye make me. I wouldn't hardly like to do that."

For a moment the missionary debated. He did not resent the threat of coercion. He believed in Anse Havey, and the form of request convinced him of its urgency.

"Gentlemen," Said the Attorney, "This Business Has Need to Be Expeditious."

So he nodded his head. "I'll be hyar when ye comes," he said.

Anse left his house that night neither by front nor back, but in the dark shadows at one side, and his talisman of luck led his noiseless feet safely between the scattered sentinels who were watching his dwelling to kill him.

The school buildings slept in silent shadows, except that from the open door of the room where her piano stood there came a soft flooding of lamplight—a single dash of orange in the nocturne of silver and gray. He went up very quietly, pausing to drink of the fragrance of the honeysuckle and there drifted on to him, as he paused, the music of the piano and the better music of her voice.

She was singing a love song.

Though he had sent no word of his coming, she was once more in evening dress, all black save for a crimson flower at her breast and one in her hair. For this time the sight of her in a costume so foreign to the hills did not distress him; it was a night that called for wonders.

She rose as the music faltered and stood on the floor, and then, at memory of their last meeting, the color mounted to her cheeks and he took her again in his arms.

She raised her hands to his shoulders and tried to push him away, but he held her firmly, and while she sought to tell him that they must find their way back to the colorless level of friendship, he could feel the wild flutter of her heart.

"Listen," she protested. "You must listen."

But Bad Anse Havey laughed.

"Ever since the first time I saw ye," he declared, "I've been listenin'. It has been a duel always between you and me. But the duel's over now, an' this time I win."

She looked up and her pupils began to widen with that intense gaze which is the drawing aside of the curtains from a woman's soul, and as though she realized that she could not trust herself to his eyes, she turned her face away. Only in its profile could he read the struggle between mind and heart, and what he read filled him with elation.

"Anse," she said in a very low voice, "give me a truce. For one hour let me think; it involves both our lives for always; let me at least have the chance to be sane. Give me an hour."

The man stepped back and released her, and she turned and led the way out to the porch, where she sank down in the hammock with her face buried in both hands. When at length she looked up she was smiling rather wanly.

"It can't be, dear," she said. But while she argued with words and ostensible reasons, the night was arguing, too—arguing for him with all its sense-steeping fragrance and alluring radiances and appeals to sleeping fires in their hearts!

And while she talked he made no response, but sat there silently attentive. At last he looked at his watch and put it back in his pocket. He rose and said quietly, but with a tone of perfect duality:

"Your truce is over."

"But don't you see? You have [illegible] my arguments."

Anse flung back his head and laughed once more.

"I don't care to argue," he said. "I come to wed." He drew from his pocket the license and the ring.

"[illegible] is waitin' over [illegible] to marry us. Will yo go over there or shall I go back an' get the parson?"

EVERY THREE MINUTES ONE DIES IN THE U. S.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is the very one to contract tuberculosis—and none are immune.

During changing seasons, or after sickness, blood-quality is most important, and if you and your family will take Scott's Emulsion after meals it will enrich your blood with health-sustaining richness, quicken circulation, and strengthen both lungs and throat.

Scott's is free from alcohol—easy to take—it cannot harm. Get a bottle to-day.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATE

Weakness abides not in poverty, but in riches. We are called again, by custom and by proclamation of our president and the governors of the several states, to devote this day to a recount of our blessings and to give thanks to the giver of all good. Poverty does less show of it.

We are the most favored of peoples. Our harvests have been bountiful. Our wealth has increased. The United States alone among the great powers on earth enjoys profound peace. The scepter of financial power has passed to our shores. Our industries are once more busy. Our markets have been restored to normal conditions. No plague or blighting scourge has visited us. Tranquility throughout our society as the world at large has been our portion for many years.

Yet it is in the plenty of our blessings that danger lurks. The fear is that we should today not give thanks humbly for what has been done for us, but pause to boast what we think we have done for ourselves. Our weakness is disclosed not in poverty, but in wealth. The temptation for people situated as we are is to contrast our happy lot with those less fortunately situated and then to take credit to ourselves for our good fortune.

From the days of the Old Testament prophets we have been warned against this very thing. The Hebrews, in the very pinnacle of their power, when their position among the nations was not dissimilar to ours at this day, were warned of their peril:

> Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping His commandments, and His judgments and His statutes, which I command thee this day. Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein ... then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God ... and say in thine heart, my power and the might of mine hand have gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may establish His covenent which He sware unto thy fathers as it is this day.

And to those among us who are inclined to boast of their wisdom, of their might, or of their wealth the words of the Prophet come again, with significant warning: "Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches."

If, as a people, we have any, or all of these three, our first thought should be of using them aright. To misuse them will bring not glory, but disgrace. Our attitude should not be one of self complacency at what we have accomplished, but when we gaze on the spectacle of poor, bleeding, broken Europe, it should be one of wonder that, unworthy as we are, we have been spared the horrors that have come upon our unfortunate brothers the past year.

Put to its best use, Thanksgiving day should be to us Americans a day of self-examination. Our shortcomings are many, our virtues few. We have little excuse to indulge in self-glorification; we have every reason to be devoutly thankful that Providence should pick us out of all the peoples of the earth to be the recipients of Heaven's choicest blessings.

THANKSGIVING MUSIC

When the autumn winds are sighing.
And the trees are stripped and bare,
Then we hear the plaintive gobble
Of the turkey on the air,
And the golden pumpkin pumping,
And the sizzle of the pies
When the range is red and roaring.
And the smoke ascends the skies.

Listen to the drumsticks beating
On a hundred million plates,
Sounding taps above the turkeys
That have met their proper fates,
While the knives and forks together
Loud duets around us play,
And the coffee urn is piping
For the feast Thanksgiving day.

—Minna Irving in Leslie's.

The Norwegian Costume.

It is at church in Norway that the national costume is best seen. In the north the women wear short dark gowns, with fringed handkerchiefs tied becomingly over their curly fair hair, black ones for the matrons and white ones for maidens. In the south the old Norwegian dress is often worn. It consists of a short dark petticoat, with a stripe of bright colors, a full white blouse and a red bodice heavily embroidered, while on Sundays a quantity of silver plus and chains are added. The headdress varies according to the occasion and the wearer's social condition. The girls wear jaunty red caps, the married women a coif made of many folds of starched white linen, plaited over a wooden frame, and a bride wears a high metal crown curiously chased and set with jewels.

Miss Oneita Barrett, of Coshocton, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lon Jones of Warsaw.

Women In The News

Detroit, Nov. 24.—A "March of Mothers" is being planned for Detroit, as a protest against war. Miss Angela Morgan of New York is co-operating with Michigan women in launching here the first movement of its kind in America, known as the "March of Mothers of America to Save the Sons of Europe." It is planned to bring together the women of Detroit to march in a body through the streets with the idea of impressing President Wilson toward joining with other neutral countries in the establishment of a permanent mediation court for the promulgation of peace plans for the benefit of warring nations. The proposed march is planned for next week.

Bangkok, Siam, Nov. 24.—Quite the most interesting bachelor in the world is the King of Siam, whose father had 300 wives. The good King Vigiravudh is imbued with western ways, and declines to marry either a sister or half sister. The country's laws decree that he must not wed beneath his rank for a first wife, and the King declares he will remain single rather than marry his sister. He is not a woman hater, but on the contrary has had his eye on more than one beauty. For many years the Siamese wondered why their ruler never married, and now they are amazed at his objection to wed his own sister. It was said the King is in love with a beautiful oriental dancer, but must abdicate to wed here. But the King loves his people and chooses to remain a bachelor.

San Antonio, Nov. 24.—The champion rifle-woman of America is Mrs. Tapp Erwin of this city, who average at trapshooting for the past few seasons has ran as high as 98 and 99 per cent. Her nearest rival is Mrs. Ada Schilling of San Jose, Calif., who made an average of 87 per cent for over two thousand possible targets. Still another star shot is Miss Harriet Hammond of Wilmington, Del., a young woman who has hung up some splendid scores. One of her most cherished possessions is a gold watch fob that testifies to 52 straight targets. She is booming trapshooting for women.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 24.—Because she was too fat to force an entrance through the jail doors, Mrs. Clara Cochran has escaped a term in the county jail. She weighs 540 pounds, and when she was haled to court for illegally selling liquor, the judge was forced to take notice of her size. She was unable to pay her fine, but rather than enlarge the jail cells, the judge extended her a period of time in which to raise the money.

Nogales, Ariz., Nov. 24—Mrs. Lucretia Roberts, who is constable and deputy sheriff of this busy section along the troublesome Mexican border, is enjoying her job. She is a widow and runs her ranch of 160 acres, and is an authority on cattle raising. She has arrested a Mexican horse thief, with the aid of deputies, and has had a tussle with wolves. She is a young woman, with a winning smile, and is the most popular officer along the border. She is bitter on "bootleggers." When she wants to round up suspects or criminals, she raises a posse and heads the chase.

Cincinnati, Nov. 24.—Countess de Chambrun, formerly Miss Clara Longsworth, of Cincinnati, is one of the few American women who have seen a real battle in the European War. She writes to friends here of her thrilling experiences at the front with her husband. She was at St. Mihiel when the Germans approached, and met many difficulties in getting to Paris. The Countess is writing books to assist victims of the war.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 24.—The success of the famous juvenile court established by Judge Ben. Lindsey is in large part due, says the judge himself, to his associate, Ida L. Gregory. She has the distinction of being the first woman in the United States to receive an appointment as associate judgeship, and that event took place seven years ago. When Judge Lindsey is away, she is in full charge, and those who know say it is remarkable the work she does. She started night schools in this city some years ago.

SCENE FROM THE "ETERNAL CITY" AT THE MYSTIC TODAY

In the full glory of Rome, with its sacred crumbling walls, Hall Caine placed the setting of the powerful story, "The Eternal City." And now the camera has followed him, reproducing what proved to be a most imposing and altogether impressive photo-spectacle ever produced.

With the ripe experience of Daniel Frohman and the fine technique of F. S. Porter and Hugh Ford, the production was made by the Famous Players' Film Co. In its presentation it has quality and quantity unsurpassed.

No more remarkable scenes of grandeur and eye-fasting perspectives have ever been shown. The acting cast, headed by the beautiful Pauline Frederick, is a superb one, while the big scenes, street crowds, mobs and excited gatherings are the work of masters.

Full of the intensest drama, with a love story of wondrous appeal, the moving pictures grip every moment.
